

MORPHINE CRAZE IN GAY PAREE

Beggars in the Champs
Elysees Are Bold
and Numerous

LACE-MAKERS ARE HIT

BY RAOUL DE SAINT RENE.
Paris, Oct. 10.—(Spl.)—Opium, as has repeatedly been explained, is committing ravages among officers and men in the naval ports, and now the "Intransigent" comes out with a doleful tale of the addiction of students in the Latin Quarter to morphine.

It says that the young men who have yielded to the morphine habit are not content to satisfy this unwholesome craving in solitude, but must needs find companions, so that whole groups are corrupted, and the evil is steadily increasing.

Nor is this deplorable weakness limited to the male sex. Young women, as a matter of fact, have set the bad example in the Quarter and the men have followed suit.

The paper, indeed, calls on the police to keep a sharp eye on the establishments of various druggists who, as it alleges, dispense morphine on the strength of prescriptions which are manifestly concocted.

It is to be hoped that there is considerable exaggeration in these assertions, but as the attention of the authorities is being called to the matter it ought to be possible to form a tolerably clear idea of the true state of things when the schools reassemble and the Latin Quarter is itself again.

The begging nuisance in the Champs Elysees has become so serious that the shopkeepers in that quarter have at last been compelled to ask the police to put an end to it. There are begging importers everywhere, but recently the Champs Elysees and the Avenue du Bois de Boulogne have had more than their share. They have become very bold, these beggars. They will leap on the steps of carriages and offer bunches of withered flowers to the occupants. The latter do not want the flowers, but it is useless to tell the beggars that; they will remain on the steps until money is given to them.

Other beggars, when refused alms at houses, use threatening language, and laugh defiance when the police are mentioned.

The number of spurious crippled and blind people in Paris has reached alarming dimensions. These impostors usually live in Faubourg Saint Antoine, the Maubert quarter, the Faubourg du Temple and the Montaigne Sainte Genevieve.

In their lodgings they contrive their frauds by which they transform themselves into cripples. When they return home of an evening their infirmities disappear as if by enchantment, and they make merry with the money they have obtained from the charitable, but credulous, public.

Maxime du Camp took up the study of the beggars of Paris, and he found that they were divided into two categories—the ambling and the sedentary beggars. The former infest the boulevards and the public walks; the latter have their special stands. Some of these stands are very valuable possessions. When their holders have made money enough they sell them to the highest bidder. A blind man recently sold his stand for $1,600.

A recent innovation is the polyglot beggar. His clients are foreigners. He learns just enough English, German, Russian and Spanish to enable him to appeal for assistance. You will find him in the vicinity of the big hotels and in the grand boulevards. He is usually well-dressed, and there is nothing aggressive about him. He does his begging in a gentlemanly way.

Another type of beggar is the man who calls at your house. He is a master of politeness. He poses as an author, a professor, or an artist in distress, and usually succeeds in melting the hearts of those he calls upon.

The pocket-book of one of these beggars was seized by the police a short time ago. It contained detailed particulars of his operations. The names and addresses of his clients were also set forth, also the dates of his visits, and the amounts he had received.

There were instructions as to how these clients had to be handled. For example, W was at first inclined to be rather skeptical. To melt the heart of X, it was necessary to speak of his last novel. Y was simple and always sympathetic; while to get money from Z, the beggar had only to vilify the Free-masons. It was calculated that this beggar made $2,000 a year.

The lace-makers of Calais are in despair. Fickle fashion is serving them badly. Lace is not wanted so much now, the reason being that ladies are dressing themselves like umbrellas, dispensing with those undergarments which usually required lace adornment. The future for the lace industry is black, because fashion has decreed that fashionable women shall abandon the Directoire, and the paniers of Louis XVI.

Many of the lace-makers have been ruined in consequence, and many are out of work.

There is another reason for the gloom in the lace trade. A craze for tulips has set in. It is believed that at Caudry in the Nord, of Calais. An employer gives the workers the falling off in the lace industry is black, because fashion has decreed that fashionable women shall abandon the Directoire, and the paniers of Louis XVI.

Many of the lace-makers have been ruined in consequence, and many are out of work.

Are You a Trust Buster?

Hey—You!

Yes, YOU'RE the man we mean.

You're always talking about the harm the trusts are doing. The country's going to the demnition bowwows, you say, because of the uncurbed trusts. Rich growing richer, poor getting poorer. Used to be that a poor man could go into business for himself in a modest way and make a good living. Now he must become a clerk or a roustabout or a hodcarrier for some corporation—some combination that has grown to be a Goliath of bigness, that has devoured the fat of the land and is still gormandizing upon it, till there's not a scrap of bone left for the under dog.

That's your line of talk. You're still handing it out and you're proud of it.

Well, now, let's see: Are YOU a trust buster YOURSELF?

Didn't we see you stalk up to the post-office just now and mail a letter with the address of a City Mail Order Store on the envelope? Hey? Didn't we?

Don't you know the Mail Order Store is a trust—one of the most dangerous in the crowd? Don't you know that it is secretly and silently and slyly closing the doors of opportunity to the young men in country towns and small cities like ours? Don't you know that the Mail Order Trust is collecting the patronage of town and country people by the mail route, thereby cutting down the patronage of the smaller merchant, the local man who is trying to build up a modest, independent, anti-trust business?

Hey?

Didn't that ever occur to you?

N. B. (which means note well): Why don't you trade at home instead of helping place?
